Community and Fundraising

Cecily's Fund is named in memory of Cecily Eastwood, who died in Zambia during her gap year in 1997. The charity was set up by her parents, Alison and Basil. Over the years, our work has helped over 20,000 children and we've spent over £6 million on projects in the country, building brighter futures in Zambia and helping to break the cycle of poverty.

Access to Education + Menstrual Hygiene Social Enterprise Project

Our Access to Education programme continues to provide essential support to children in need. In 2020 we were able to help marginalised children with school fees, uniforms and books, supporting 433 highly disadvantaged children in Kitwe district alone. We also help train school guidance teachers in the care of orphans and vulnerable children, contribute towards teacher salaries and support feeding programmes. Now our new approach to working with schools is gaining momentum as we continue to work closely with selected schools, building capacity and focusing on setting standards in four key areas of governance, pupil care and support, parent and community engagement, and strengthening links with local Government.

Helping Mothers and Carers Become More Financially Literate

Our GROW (Grassroots Owning our Wealth) Saving and Loan Group initiative helps women and their families retain their independence and maintain economic empowerment, a significant step towards creating confident, self-sustaining communities.

The combination of financial literacy training, with learning how to save small amounts of money has resulted in many vulnerable women being able to start small businesses and accumulate wealth by saving regularly.

One carer shared, “Before the training my teenage daughters and myself used to use ordinary sanitary pads and sometimes chitenge cloths during menstruation. The girls did not have adequate information about menstrual hygiene. I am very thankful that the training has taught me vital information about menstrual hygiene which I will be able to share with my daughters and others in the community.”

Most of the mothers and carers participating in the financial literacy training have received little or no formal education.

The opportunity to learn new skills enables them to learn how to budget and become more financially literate. Despite not having any prior knowledge of record keeping, budgeting, or simple calculations, they proudly expressed that they had learnt a great deal of useful skills and information that they were happily ready to start applying to their personal finances as well. Many of them explained that they were pleased to move away from their use of money lenders known as Kaloba, where the initial borrowed amount attracts 50% interest in addition to collateral. At the end of a training session a mother, Chanda, excitedly said “I have learnt a new skill! I can now actually manufacture reusable pads - for use by myself and my daughters and also for sale, which can make money that I can use for household welfare.”

Leadership Through Service: John Sela's Story

Are leaders born or made? What inspires individuals to take on leadership roles?

Cecily's Fund alumnus John Sela is running for the Councillor's seat in his local community, Chati Ward — and his motivation is extremely personal. We are fortunate to find out how and why the boy who sold home-brewed beer became the man determined to help provide innovative approaches to sustainable community development.

In a few short sentences, please tell us about yourself.

Life was hard growing up. While I was fortunate to go to school, it became increasingly difficult for my family to support me and my 5 siblings and once I completed school, I was met by the unforgiving conditions of unemployment. This painful and difficult period went on for a few years and it wasn't until 2015 when a neighbour told me about the Cecily's Fund project called Connecting Communities Learning for Life (CCLL) that I first began to have hope for the future again. During this time, I was exposed to so many ideas and opportunities to learn and I gained useful skills. The guidance I received from the Cecily's Fund team inspired me to register my own organization.

To what extent has Cecily's Fund impacted the direction of your vision for your community?

The value that is so rooted in me is of servanthood towards the people around and the community at large. I always hope to provide a light for people feeling like they are in darkness. In addition to my newly acquired skills, I had since learned about Cecily Eastwood's life story, and I remain moved years later by her passion to help vulnerable children & young adults whose parents died from HIV and AIDS pandemic.

My time as part of the CCL4L programme was truly life changing!

What is the vision for your service should you be elected Councillor of your ward?

The vision for my community stems from the many challenges that Zambian OVCs and their families face, which among other things, include extremely limited to no access to adequate health and education infrastructures. Lack of employment opportunities is also a very big challenge for many Zambians - especially the youth. This makes them lose hope and end up loitering, becoming irresponsible in the community and often find themselves engaging in all kinds of detrimental activities such as drug and alcohol abuse, prostitution, early marriages, and robbery, to name a few. Approximately 70% of my community are living in poverty. My vision once elected is to contribute to health, education, infrastructure development, employment creation and poverty reduction amongst the marginalized, vulnerable families in my community, Chati Ward.

Alumnus John Sela is running for Councillor's seat in his community.

“Currently I am a founder and president for a non-profit youth-led organization called Mindset Life Youth Association.

Our vision is to raise youth advocates and leaders in promoting quality education, good health practices, and entrepreneurial career pathways in Zambia.”

“...Cecily’s Fund taught me that – true leadership focuses on uplifting the life of others.”

Which qualities do you believe a great leader must possess?

There are a number of qualities that I strongly believe a leader should have but the following are so dear to my heart and they include;

Vision – I am a strong believer in the adage that says, ‘Vision is everything for a leader’. It is the vision that leads the leader, provide hope and help him or her to organize resources needed to achieve it.

Communication – There cannot be a leader without followers and vice-versa. Thus it is the duty of a leader to communicate his or her vision and make people understand why they should get involved in that vision.

Servanthood – I have learnt that leadership is not necessarily being in the position to give instructions or orders but living a life with the focus to bettering the life of others.

Character – Nothing defines a leader better than their character. Leaders are those that never compromise to their rooted principles even when others don’t agree with their course of action.

Initiatives – Things don’t go as planned, and to be a good leader, I always try to take the initiative by looking for new opportunities and willing to take action.

Please share how your personal experiences have influenced your vision for your community.

As a result of the hardships we went through as a family, I knew the meaning of poverty at a very tender age. My mum used to brew the local beer called munkoyo and then sell it just to buy food for us. Paying our school fees was also a struggle. I remember mum would take me and my siblings with her to do piecemeal work in an effort to raise money towards our education.

When I passed grade 10, I used to walk 11km (6.8miles) to go to school. Also, there was no water in the area I went to school—we used to share the ponds with wandering animals. This was all very challenging, and unfortunately this is still the case for several children and young youth here in Zambia. Personally I believe in being the change you want to see, as nothing changes until one takes the step. The challenges I faced are the wheels that drive my passion for improving the livelihood of the people in my community.

Any final words?

To all readers, especially youths:

You should never define yourself by your current situation, nor should you compare yourself to others because we are all unique – believe in yourself. Life is full of ups and downs but the key to the realization of your dream is endurance.

You are born for greatness.

Spring24 Zambian TV: Live Interview with Jackson Tembo

Jackson’s live interview is such incredible insight into how deeply and positively Cecily’s Fund impacts the lives of Zambian children and young people in our care.

Jackson gave a very successful television interview when he was interviewed in Lusaka, live on Spring24 TV’s Morning Daily Feel Good show. He spoke about life as a Cecily’s Fund beneficiary as well as the positive, life-long effect of some of our programmes, such as our Peer Health Educator programme.

London 10k: Southborough School for Team Cecily's Fund

A very big thank you to the fantastic staff team from Southborough High School for running the London 10k for Cecily's Fund again! Below is a statement from the school's headteacher, Matthew Illies:

"Some years ago a number of colleagues were preparing to mark World Aids Awareness Day and at that time, we were keen to support people struggling notably with the impact of HIV/AIDS. Internet searches brought to our attention Cecily's Fund and we were particularly interested in the fact that the Fund was principally an educational charity.

Involving ourselves with Cecily's Fund made perfect sense to us as we too are 'in the business of education' Staff were confident that pupils would embrace an opportunity to respond to support 'disadvantaged' young people in their educational efforts. We decided to invite both Alison and Basil Eastwood to the School to speak with us about Cecily, as well as about Zambia and the children there and the work of Cecily's Fund.

We were immensely impressed by both Alison and Basil and over the years that followed, Southborough High School has annually sought to continue our support, specifically by running the London 10K. Every year staff have been generous in giving of their time to run the London 10K and our pupils and the wider school community have been generous in donating repeatedly in support of what all consider to be a 'noble and worthy' cause."

International School of Lausanne Sports Fundraiser

Would you like to offer to have a virtual coffee morning, a solo adventure challenge, or something bigger (government rules applied)? Everything helps our young Zambians improve their life chances. Maybe your children's or grandchildren's school would like to give a donation from a sponsored walk? All ideas are welcome — and encouraged!
