Introduction

We at Jigsaw are committed to becoming actively anti-racist in the work that we do. We recognise that anti-racism is not a new practice and we are in the process of learning about what racism and anti-racism look like within the development and humanitarian sector, as well as within the UK and our own organisation. Through this process, we have drawn on a range of resources from books to podcasts to videos, and have collated some of those resources for this list. This list does not contain all of the resources we have used, but rather contains articles that are not behind a paywall and books that are readily available in the UK. The list also contains material that has been influential in the development of our team members' perspectives on racism and anti-racism in research and the social sciences more broadly. This is a living document and we welcome suggestions for further reading on these topics.

This resource list is split into seven sections:

- Core resources for Jigsaw staff
- General resources
- Anti-racism, international development and humanitarianism
- Anti-racism in research
- Anti-racism in the social sciences
- UK focused resources
- Externally curated lists

Through sharing this list publicly it is our aim to contribute to and participate in discussions within the development and humanitarian sector on how to be anti-racist, especially with other organisations based in the UK.

Reading list

Core resources for Jigsaw staff

These readings are recommended for all current and new Jigsaw staff. They are taken from the longer list below and cover a range of topics and areas that we at Jigsaw consider to be important to be actively anti-racist both in our work and internal practices.

General	Dismantling Racism - ' Dismantling Racism ' workbook, especially the definition of racism and white supremacy characteristics
General	Reni Eddo-Lodge - Why I'm No Longer Talking to White People About Race
Sector-specific	The New Humanitarian - ' The West's humanitarian reckoning: When the West falls into crisis ' webinar
Research focused	ESPA - Research for development impact: The role of equitable partnerships
UK specific	Akala - Natives: Race and class in the ruins of empire

General resources

Jigsaw is committed to anti-racist practices within the organisation as well as within the wider sector. This section includes resources which discuss what defines racism, white supremacy and anti-racism, as well as sources on how to build an anti-racist organisation.

Anti-racism, international development and humanitarianism

This section is the longest as the sector focus is fundamental to the work we do. At Jigsaw we are considering the problematic roots of the development and humanitarian sector, and the impact this has on the countries we do research in and the communities we work with.

Anti-racism in research

Jigsaw is a research organisation and is aware of the impact of inequalities in the production of knowledge, and the tendency of research ‘about’ rather than ‘with’ people. Readings in this area inform our approach to research partnerships and participatory methodologies.

Anti-racism in the social sciences

These texts are a selection of the wider discussion around race, and the intersections with gender and class, that have taken place in the social sciences for decades. They enable us to approach the discussions in the development and humanitarian sector from a theoretical as well as practical angle.

UK-focused resources

Jigsaw is based in the UK and recruits staff that are UK based. Learning about the legacy of colonialism and the lives of marginalised people within the UK is as crucial to the work we do as learning about how white supremacy operates within the development and humanitarian sector.
