

Longitudinal and Life Course Studies (LLCS)
Volume 17: Issue 1 (January 2026)

EDITORIAL

Work, work, work, work and work

Author: Tony Robertson

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.1332/17579597Y2025D000000070>

Pages: 2–4

RESEARCH ARTICLES

Relative differences in parenting time and fertility intention: evidence from China Family Panel Studies

Authors: Bixin Zhong, Xinyong Lu, Runqi Chen, and Huan Zeng

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.1332/17579597Y2025D000000063>

Pages: 5–30

Work trajectory and depressive symptoms among older adults in rural China: a sequence analysis approach

Authors: Hongzhou Chen and Junjie Wu

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.1332/17579597Y2025D000000064>

Pages: 31–55

Complex families in the United Kingdom: mapping children's diverse family pathways and their correlates from birth to age ten

Authors: Michaela Šťastná, Júlia Mikolai, Nissa Finney, and Katherine Lisa Keenan

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.1332/17579597Y2025D000000065>

Pages: 56–82

Work history and functional limitations in later life under institutional change: economic reform and work sequences in China

Author: Chengming Han

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.1332/17579597Y2025D000000069>

Pages: 83–102

Churn in later adulthood? A gendered life course approach using short-term panel data from the US Current Population Survey

Authors: Janet Wang, Phyllis Moen, and Sarah Flood

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.1332/17579597Y2025D000000067>

Pages: 103–128