

2023 SLLS Annual Conference

Life Courses in Times of Uncertainty

9 – 11 October
Ludwig Maximilian University of Munich

Sponsored by

President's Welcome

It is my great pleasure to welcome all of you, from across the globe, to the 2023 Society for Life Course and Longitudinal Studies Conference being held this year at the Ludwig-Maximilians-University in the heart of Munich.

This year's theme is "Life courses in times of uncertainty" and we have an excellent range of keynote talks, concurrent sessions and interactive opportunities to ensure that when we leave Munich we will all have had the chance to learn something new or to view a familiar field through a fresh lens. It is wonderful to note that the program this year really embraces the longitudinal aspect of the life course. Many sessions focus on trajectories and transitions across different life stages or across generations. The diverse themes covered in the invited talks, the symposia and posters highlight the multiple perspectives and multiple disciplines that inform life course research and that are required to ensure that we capture the complexity of lived realities in our efforts to understand what shapes development over time and importantly how we can improve life course trajectories across different population contexts.

I am pleased to see evidence of the ongoing exploration of the complexity of the intersection and interplay between biology and the wider social environment. This year talks include a consideration of genetics as an integrated part of our discipline which is exciting. Also, the important themes of gender and privilege, that emerged from panel discussions at our 2022 meeting in Ohio, are being further interrogated at this year's meeting.

Of course, inequalities in developmental outcomes and wellbeing continue to feature prominently throughout our conference. This topic cannot be overlooked until we discover innovative and constructive ways to close the gaps that continue to persist across the life course within and across different population groups globally. We will also consider innovative ways to collect and utilize information from existing and emerging cohort studies across the globe to enable us to better measure and interrogate the constructs that are so important in understanding what shapes life course wellbeing. We need to continue to evolve our methods and approaches to analyses to allow us to not only identify risk factors but also to better elucidate "what works" so as to translate our collective evidence into strategies that will make a difference in the populations we serve.

During the conference we will have occasion to honour the legacy of some of our inspirational leaders who were pioneers in life course and longitudinal studies and who helped enable these meetings to take place some decades ago now. You will also have a chance to participate in the many current sub-groups who are working to take us boldly into the future, and also to contribute your ideas about how the society runs at our AGM. I look forward to welcoming you to all of these sessions and opportunities.

I would like to express my gratitude to Sabine Walper & Josef Brüderl as well as their expert team at DJI and LMU, including Julia Reim, Annika Schunke, and Diana Schacht, for their commitment to facilitating and hosting this conference. After several years of disruption it is a privilege to be able to gather together and enjoy not only the formal sessions but also enjoy the opportunities to network with our global peers as well as to build new relationships that might advance this field of research for decades to come. My particular thanks go to Cat Westlake in England who keeps everything running smoothly in the background. Her efforts are enormous and usually unseen.

Overall, I wish you a wonderful time at this year's conference in Munich. I hope you all return home afterwards feeling enriched, enlightened and energised to continue to pursue your own life course and longitudinal research, and to use it to create change for good in your own parts of the globe.

Professor Susan Morton (President, SLLS)

Welcome From Your Hosts

We are excited to host the SLLS conference 2023 at the famous Ludwig-Maximilians-University in the middle of beautiful Munich! Welcome to Bavaria, the largest of Germany's 16 states, and its capital Munich, well-known not only for its famous Oktoberfest and the Munich soccer team, but also for its beautiful old town around Marienplatz and Viktualienmarkt (a must-see!) and its rich academic life.

Ludwig-Maximilians-University (LMU) is one of the leading universities in Europe with a history of more than 500 years. As a true "universitas" it offers more than 300 courses of study in all fields of knowledge and a wide range of additional qualifications. It stands for excellent academic education and outstanding research. With more than 52,000 students and over 820 professors, it is the third largest university in Germany, only surpassed in size by the Online University Hagen and the University of Cologne. Together with the Technical University Munich and the 17 Universities of Applied Sciences, Munich counts over 140,000 students, and the larger Metropolitan Region of Munich even reaches almost 200,000 students. You will find an inspiring academic environment, best suited to host the SLLS conference and welcome its participants from various disciplines and many parts of the world.

The conference will be held in the historical main building of LMU, built in 1835, which provides an impressive ambience and inspiring atmosphere. Quite importantly, it is easy to reach with two subway lines (no. 3 and 6) and various bus lines. You will find many cafés and restaurants in this area, but don't have to look out for these during daytime, since we will serve beverages, lunch packages, and snacks during the coffee breaks. At the end of the day, you may want to take a walk in the large English Garden, only a few steps away, or explore Schwabing, the party zone of Munich with many bars, clubs, and cinemas. The wonderful museums (Alte Pinakothek, Pinakothek der Moderne and more; see <https://www.pinakothek.de/en>) in the museum quarter, all in walking distance, are also highly recommended.

But of course, the rich and diverse conference programme is the highlight of these three days in mid-October. With four keynote lectures, two invited talks, 56 symposia and paper sessions organized in six parallel strands, a poster session and several post-conference workshops, it provides new findings on a broad range of topics, informs about available data sets for scientific use, and introduces new methods in data analysis. Last, but not least, there will be great opportunities for networking during the welcome reception, coffee breaks, and the conference dinner, including an evening out for early career delegates.

SLLS is truly interdisciplinary, and so is its 2023 conference – not only regarding its participants and contributions, but also with respect to the organizing team. Colleagues from the Departments of Psychology, Sociology, and Education at LMU joined forces with the German Youth Institute to provide a comfortable, smooth context for this conference. We are grateful for the financial support offered by the German Research Foundation and our sponsors (CLOSER, Infas, the Life Course Center, and Mangold International).

We hope you enjoy the conference!

Sabine Walper & Josef Brüderl on behalf of the local organizing team with Julia Reim, Annika Schunke, and Diana Schacht.
